Miss Cumberland 1993, Lorie Hammock, drives forward into the future in the spirit of Cumberland women.

THE CENTENNIAL OF WOMEN AT CUMBERLAND UNIVERSITY

In September, 1893, Morella Cowden enrolled as a student in the Theological School of Cumberland University at Lebanon, Tennessee. The previous year, a Kentucky Presbytery had ordained a woman minister and sent women as commissioners to the General Assembly of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and they were seated by vote of the commissioners.

The question of education and training of women missionaries had long been discussed, for women had been sent to the foreign mission field all along, usually with their husbands.

The first woman to receive a degree from Cumberland University, however, for Morella Cowden did not return for a second year's studies, was Mary Hunter (Mrs. S.P.) Bixler of North Liberty, Ohio. The Bachelor of Divinity was conferred upon her in 1896.

The University catalog for 1896 states that she received a Certificate of Completion. But in the catalog for the following year, when Mrs. Bixler was a graduate student, she is listed as "B.D., Cumberland University," and no other woman student was listed earlier as holding a degree. Therefore some action must have been taken between June, 1896, and the publication of the following year's catalog, and it is she who must be recorded as the first woman graduate and not the three women who received degrees from the college in June, 1898.

It is undeniably true that coeducation was not officially permitted, other than in the Theological School, until 1897 and therefore Helen Buquo, Bachelor of Arts, Mary Phelps Darby, also B.A., and Judith Frances Darby, Bachelor of Science, are still listed as the first to receive a collegiate baccalaureate degree from Cumberland University. Miss Buquo was a resident of Erin, Tennessee; the Misses Darby of Evansville, Indiana.

The official statement on coeducation appears in the 1898 catalog. It reversed the statement specifically prohibiting women from matriculating as candidates for any degree. There were, however, two women, listed as students in the Middle Class of the Theological School in 1894-1895, without any notation that they are other than regular students, and one of them, Mrs. Bixler, did eventually receive her Bachelor of Divinity degree.

Before the Civil War there was an institution in Lebanon called the Cumberland Female Seminary and it was apparently under the patronage of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. An advertisement in the Banner of Peace, Sept. 17, 1852, announced:

"The next session of this institution will commence on Monday, the 4th of October next. The spacious new building will be dedicated by appropriate exercises. A numerous attendance of the friends of education, and citizens generally, is expected."

This institution had no connection with Cumberland University.

Between 1893 and 1898 fourteen women were on campus as regular or special students, although the University had in 1894 also made a contract with Lebanon College for Young Ladies (better known as L.C.Y.L., L.C., or "Elsie") to operate that full-fledged, collegiate-level school for women as The Annex of Cumberland University.

It is suggested in the University history that the administration did not object to having women as students, they just didn't want anyone to know they were there!

THE L.C. CONNECTION

The first female students admitted to Cumberland University were enrolled in the Business School in 1875-1876. The eight were listed in the University catalog as:

Miss Mattie Bardwell, Starkville, Mississippi; Miss A.M. Cahill, Nashville; Miss R.G. Grossman, Nashville; Miss Ellie Hennessey, Springfield; Miss Mollie Hennessey, Ashland City; Miss M. Matthews, Nashville; Miss Eliza Nall, Nashville; Miss Sallie Spaulding, Nashville.

Mrs. Lizzie Mace Baker of Lebanon believed that she was the first woman to receive a diploma from Cumberland. It was awarded April 27, 1892, and is signed by Chancellor N. Green, W.J. Grannis, and Herbert Grannis. This indicates that it was a diploma of the Preparatory School where Grannis was principal, rather than a collegiate degree. Earlier diplomas were issued to females by the Cumberland University School for Girls, a separate institution with no organic connection with the college. Mrs. Baker was a daughter of Thompson and Jennie Martin Mace. Before her marriage she taught in Lebanon.

Lebanon College for Young Ladies, a separate institution, became the Annex of Cumberland University by a contractural agreement in 1894. Both schools retained their separate charters and administrations and in 1898 the agreement was terminated by mutual ageement. Cumberland became a coeducational institution officially in 1897. That spring as stated above the first degrees conferred by Cumberland University upon women graduates were given Helen Buquo, Erin, Tennessee, and Mary Phelps Darby, Evansville, Indiana, Bachelor of Arts, and Judith Frances Darby, Evansville, Bachelor of Science.

Here is the place to review the story of preparatory education in Wilson County because the education of girls and young women is an integral part of that story. In 1828, Campbell Academy was moved into Lebanon and a two-story brick structure rose on a rocky hilltop on High Street. In the 1830's, there came to Lebanon from New England two sisters, Harriet Abbe and Mrs. Ann Abbe Kilborn. They opened a school for young ladies a few hundred yards south of Campbell Academy and called it Abbe Institute. The two schools had the same board of trustees until 1846 when a separate charter was granted Abbe Institute.

As in other parts of the South, the education of young females was considered in Wilson County of the 1830's to be an unnecessary evil. Writing in 1888, an elderly lady recalled that her father sent her to school enough for her to have been a good scholar if she had been allowed to pursue scholarly studies. But alas: "The only books which I was permitted to carry were the spelling book and Testament," she said. "To learn how to read was thought enough for girls. Hence, most of them were not even allowed to write or study elementary arithmetic."

Girls were not the business of the new Cumberland University Preparatory School when it held its first classes in 1842. The preparation of young men for entrance into a college which accepted only males as students was its concern. The first teachers were T.N. Jarman and C.L. Price, both of whom were upperclassmen of the college. Price served only five months. In February, 1844, classes were moved from their temporary home in the church house of the Cumberland Presbyterian congregation, located across the street from Abbe Institute. It is more than probable that the young ladies of the Institute were sad to see the boys go across town to the new college building located on a large, shady bluegrass campus. Here the classes were organized more formally and the preparatory school received a new teacher, B.S. Foster, who served until 1846. R.P. Decherd began work as a teacher in January, 1846, and was appointed the first principal on February 16, 1850. It was at this time that the Preparatory School became fully separate from the college in fact as well as name. The university organization was being perfected, with the opening of the School of Law in 1847. In 1852, a School of Engineering was opened, and in 1854 the Theological School.

The curriculum of the Preparatory School is itemized in the Cumberland University catalog of 1848. It included two years of Greek, three of Latin, with Caesar in the third year and Vergil and Cicero for seniors, and also elementary geometry and algebra as fourth-year subjects. There was an English class for those not preparing for college. This list reveals that the school was not merely the one sub-collegiate class, but offered, after its reorganization in 1846, the four years standard in academies and admitted at least some students who did not intend to progress into college, although in general the curriculum was in the strict classical mold.

STUDENT LIFE IN THE EIGHTIES

If there was a time that could be called normal, it may have been the 1880's in a small college town. The last days of B.W. McDonnold's presidency had been stormy; Nathan Green Jr. brought a serene attitude to the administrative side. His was the calm judicial temperament supported by a naturally mild and loving nature.

The students came into town mostly on the little train that ran from Nashville out the branch line to the depot at the end of South Cumberland, an interesting building with a mansard roof and iron winged wheels supporting its balcony. A hack met the train and brought the students to town. They boarded with families of the town or at Camp Blake for the young preaching probationers. This custom would last into the twentieth century, making a close tie between town and gown and introducing a cosmopolitan flavor to Lebanon life.

Social life for the young men revolved around the Greek letter fraternities. Eight had been founded at Cumberland before the Civil War.

After Benjamin Foster founded the Lebanon College for Young Ladies in 1886, there was an opportunity, although strictly limited, for feminine companionship. Many a Lebanon young woman would marry a law student or a preacher. Love has always found a way.

There were outings to the river, buggy rides out shady West Main Street across the bridge over Barton's Creek, picnics, dances at Baird's Hotel, whist parties, and dinners in the hospitable homes. The famous sulphur well was at the end of a country lane not far from Divinity Hall and Sunday afternoon walks there were popular.

In 1887 there was an opera house on the second floor of the new West Side Hotel, and repertory companies would present melodramas and comedies. Caruthers Hall was also the scene of plays and lyceum programs, both musical and dramatic. The literary societies flourished: Amassagassean for the college students, Philomathean and Caruthers for the lawyers, and Heurethelian for the Theologs, the latter producing the college magazine. Class and club elections were heated affairs. The bicycle craze was beginning as the Gay Nineties arrived; and tennis was popular with the young ladies. So were croquet and wading in the creeks on a pleasant Saturday afternoon. Sans Souci, a club for the local society belles, flourished in the 1890's and was hostess for many entertainments to which students were invited.

After 1893 the scattering of women students attended classes in either Corona Hall on Main Street or Divinity Hall on a hill more than a mile to the west. Most were married and lived with their student-husbands in apartments or rented houses in the town. The cornerstone of a new building was laid in 1892 with elaborate ceremonies. And in September, 1896, students of the Literary School began to meet classes in the new building.

One student was moved by the departure from the place where so many lessons had been taught and where the changing seasons of a quarter-century had passed from autumn's gold to winter's snows and then to springtime's lilacs and composed a tribute in verse, in the mood of Princeton's "Old Nassau:"

CORONA HALL

Of all the scenes of college days
  That linger on sweet mem'ry's wall,
There's none so dear to C.U. "Lits"
  As that of old Corona Hall

Just think of all the hundred terms,
  Of months and years so long now past,
In which so many awkward lads
  Have 'neath this roof their fortunes cast.

And how those fellows, some of them,
  Have bravely learned the lessons rare,
Which "Weir" and "Jid" and "Buck" and "Mc."
  So often taught with wondrous care.

How, having nobly earned degrees,
  They've wandered from this fountain great,
And Alma Mater's honor fair
  Raised high in business, Church, and State.

And now closed fast these portals are.
  We're glad, yet sadly do we pass
From this, so sweet and cherished spot,
  To yonder proud and stately mass.

The future student, great and wise,
  Will toil and "bust" 'neath tower tall,
But this is not so dear to us
  As mold'ring old Corona Hall.

A GREAT NAME IN WOMEN'S EDUCATION

A graduate of Cumberland was to become one of the great figures in the higher education of women in the South.

William E. Ward had graduated from the Lebanon college in 1851 with a Bachelor of Arts degree, returned the next year as a law student, and returned again in 1854-1856 as a student in the School of Theology. Dr. Ward became a Cumberland Presbyterian minister.

In 1865 he opened a seminary for young ladies in Nashville at the corner of Summer and Spruce Streets, succeeding the Nashville Female Institute. It became an immediate success and within the year had moved to new buildings on Spruce Street between Church and Broadway.

Miss Clara Earle was the first woman member of the college faculty.

Soon afterward Dr. Ward went to Lebanon on business for Ward's Seminary but also moved by nostalgia for the scenes of his college days.

In 1866, the magnificent Cumberland University building, designed by the famous architect William Strickland, lay in ashes. Standing on the old campus at the corner of College Street and University Drive (Now East Spring Street) beside a fragment of Corinthian column, Dr. Ward took a piece of charred wood and, remembering the example of Christopher Wren at Saint Paul's after the Great Fire of London, scrawled — "Resurgam."

"I shall arise," Dr. Ward wrote, and arise Cumberland did, by sheer determination. It was a portent of crisis after crisis surmounted, of tough survival by what seemed almost miraculous means over unbelievable difficulties. The phoenix, the legendary bird rising from its ashes, an emblem of resurrection, became and remains the emblem of Cumberland, one hundred fifty years after its birth.

Ward's role in female education continued to be important, his school growing until by 1874 there were forty-eight graduates. Upon his death in 1887 Ward Seminary was acquired by a joint stock company which continued to operate the school until its merger with Belmont College in 1913 and became famous as Ward-Belmont School.

But it may have been in quite another aspect of female education that W.E. Ward should be remembered. In 1875 in the course in physical education Ward's Seminary organized the first girls' basketball team in the South and one of the first in the nation.

Greenwood Seminary, a highly selective boarding school for young ladies of several states, was established by Nathaniel Lawrence Lindsley, son of the noted educator, Philip Lindsley of Nashville.

Greenwood, chartered in 1851, was located in Dr. Lawrence Lindsley's home, a pleasant two-story brick mansion four miles southeast of Lebanon on the plantation acreage inherited by the Lindsleys from Nathanel Lawrence, father-in-law of Dr. Philip Lindsley. Lawrence was a native of New Jersey who joined a North Carolina battalion when the British occupied the town of Princeton where he was a student in the college. He became a lieutenant, was present in the Long Room at Fraunces' Tavern in New York City when General Washington bade farewell to his officers in 1783, and was an original member of the Society of the Cincinnati. The State of North Carolina granted him two tracts of land of 2,560 acres each, one of them on Spring Creek in Wilson County where Greenwood was to be built and the seminary later established.

It is not unlikely that the ownership of this land was the factor that influenced Philip Lindsley's decision to come to Nashville as president of a small college rather than to continue his promising career with the College of New Jersey. At any rate, he did operate the farm on Spring Creek for several years, leasing it to surrounding farmers who did the actual work. His son, Nathaniel Lawrence Lindsley, served Cumberland University from 1844 to 1849 as professor of ancient languages; J.B. Lindsley was university historian. Greenwood Seminary was to continue until 1883, Mrs. N. Lawrence Lindsley operating the school after her husband's death. Its demise, coupled with that of the other schools for girls in Wilson County — Corona Institute in 1873 and the Lebanon Female Institute in 1876 — contributed to the modification of Cumberland University Preparatory School from an exclusively male domain to a coeducational school. From Corona, Cumberland acquired the building on West Main Street in which the College of Arts, left scattered by the destruction of the university property by fire at the close of the Civil War, could be housed. From the Lebanon Female College and Greenwood Seminary, Cumberland was to obtain students, first for its temporary substitute for co-education, the Cumberland University School for Girls, which was operated from 1877 to the mid-1880's, and then for its co-educational preparatory school.

(The status of girls and women at Cumberland is not easily determined by official records, whether of the school itself or of the U.S. Commissioner of Education, from whose annual reports much of the foregoing information has been deduced. The Commissioner's Report for 1878 lists a female department of the Preparatory School which opened in the spring of 1877 with Miss Amanda Anderson as principal, and reports the enrollment of the Preparatory school as 38 females and 70 males. The Cumberland catalog lists female students in the business school in 1873; but as has been stated co-education was not formally approved until 1897. So it does seem to have been policy to accept women but not to acknowledge their presence.)

In 1902 David Earle Mitchell, the newly-installed, 26-year-old, Pennsylvania-born president of Cumberland, I.W.P. Buchanan, professor of mathematics, and Amzi W. Hooker. Lebanon businessman, established a new preparatory school in Lebanon: Castle Heights School. It was instantly successful, enrolling 140 boarding students and 40 day students. Many of these were female, for Castle Heights was at first co-educatonal.

From 1902 to 1910 Cumberland University had no preparatory school, but it was found necessary to maintain a sub-freshman class for those who, as President Winstead Paine Bone tactfully stated in the official history of the University, "lacked a little of being ready for college entrance."

In 1915 the domestic science (later called "home ec") class was full.

Miss Margaret Campbell, later a member of the college faculty, is seen here as a college girl of 1916.

The sub-freshman class was fully co-educational. Cumberland's sub-freshman class of 1909-10 enrolled 24 students. At the beginning of the next year, the Preparatory School officially re-opened.

During the first decade of the twenthieth century, women became full partners in academic and campus life at Cumberland.

The law school soon attracted women students from California to New York, more than a score before 1922. The college faculty included eight women teachers before 1923. In addition the School of Music included seventeen women instructors of piano, violin, and voice during the same period, although this was not remarkable as music had long been considered a woman's field.

What was perhaps more remarkable was the selection of a woman as dean of the new Yancey School of Journalism in 1922. She was Mary Stahlman Douglas, who later was to be book editor of The Nashville Banner for many years.

It was more a matter of tone. Women students fitted into the social patterns of the campus. That seven of nineteen of the freshmen of 1916 were women was not even a matter to be noticed.

For many years anyone who attended Cumberland University before 1914 would remember "Miss Earle." This was especially true of the growing number of women students, to whom Clara Earle was an inspiration.

Miss Earle, professor of modern languages from 1902 to 1914, was the first woman member of the Cumberland faculty.

She was born in Washington County, Arkansas. Her father, the Rev. F.R. Earle, was for many years president of Cane Hill College and after graduating from that college she went to the University of Arkansas, where she earned both the Bachelor and Master of Arts degrees. On completion of her course there she was elected an instructor in the Department of Modern Languages. During the time of her professorship at Fayetteville she spent her summers at the University of Chicago.

After four years she resigned to undertake studies at the Sorbonne and the College de France. While in Europe she also traveled in Italy and Spain. Returning from the Continent Miss Earle joined the faculty of Arkansas Cumberland College and remained there one year until she was elected Professor of Modern Languages at Cumberland University. She was also appointed Dean of Women.

Her attractive personality and competence in the classroom made Miss Earle a popular member of the university family. Her stay in Lebanon of twelve years ended in the general reorganization of the faculty in 1914 at the close of the administration of Dr. Winstead Paine Bone. By that time Miss Earle had been joined on the teaching staff by another woman, Kate Adele Hinds (Mrs. Willard Steele) who like her father, Dr. J.I.D.Hinds, taught chemistry and biology. They were the forerunners of a long line of women teachers: never again would Cumberland have an exclusively male faculty.

Clara Earle then went to the College of the Ozarks in Clarksville, Arkansas, where she remained for the rest of her professional career.

WOMEN IN THE LAW SCHOOL

In 1902 Mrs. Mildred (W.P.) Bouton was the first woman to complete the regular course in the School of Law. She had received special permission from Judge Nathan Green Jr., Chancellor of the University and professor of law. But when she completed the course successfully, she did not receive a diploma but a Certificate of Completion.

Soon after that the University began to admit women students to the law school without prejudice, one, Mrs. Loren Felix Vaughn of Poplar Bluff, Missouri, in the summer of 1905. The young college president, David Earle Mitchell, a man of progressive ideas, must be given much of the credit for this. It was many years before the first woman was admitted to the more conservative Vanderbilt law school in Nashville, just as Cumberland admitted Hispanic and Native American students years before they could attend law schools in Texas, Oklahoma, and Florida.

The Nineteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution was adopted in 1919. By June, 1922, twenty-one women had studied law at Cumberland.

The chapter of Iota Tau Tau, women's legal fraternity, established at Cumberland in 1929, provided several officers for the national organization. The founder at Cumberland was Sara Hardison, who continued as law librarian until the school was moved to Birmingham, Alabama, in 1961. She had received her law degree from Cumberland in

One institution in the law school that attracted almost one hundred percent of the women "legal eagles" was the public speaking class. In 1934-1935 for example there were twenty-one students of public speaking. One-fourth were women. The class was taught by May Gregory Russeau who had gained her experience as a member of the Redpath Chautauqua. She was proud to claim as her pupils some of the notables of American public life (she was particularly proud of Governor Frank G. Clement, a speech student of 1937-1939).

SARA HARDISON

Sara Hardison knew more lawyers by their first names than any other person in America.

She taught thousands of law students the fascinating course in legal bibliography, completion of which taught the embryo lawyers where to find the law. Judge Sam Gilbreath would say: "A lawyer does not need to know all of the law. But he does need to know where to find the law. And Miss Sara will show you."

She eagerly read the list of successful applicants for the bar. She had provided most of them tips on how to prepare for the important examination and referred them to cases which were likely to be the subject of questions. "Now, Henry," she would say, "I think you should be sure to look up Tuck against Payne and know it."

Miss Hardison joined the faculty of the law school in 1922. She served until the school moved to Birmingham. Offered the same position at Samford University, she rejected the offer, saying, "My life is here. Why should I leave?"

Judge Gilreath, Dean Arthur Weeks, and "her boys" saw to it that she had a retirement income, and she finished her life in the comfortable little house that she and her sister Madge shared just off the University campus on McClain Avenue.

The Hardisons had come to Lebanon from Culleoka. She attended Cumberland and received the Bachelor of Laws degree in 1922. It was not generally known but Miss Hardison had also earned the Bachelor of Music degree from the Schubert Conservatory of Music. After hours in the law library she would sometimes slip up to the auditorium on the second floor of Caruthers Hall and play on the concert grand piano that stood on the stage!

Miss Hardison was the founder of Zeta chapter of Iota Tau Tau national legal sorority at Cumberland in 1929. The first chapter had been established at Southwestern University, Los Angeles, California, in 1925. Because Cumberland had many women students in its law school, particularly after 1920, the chapter flourished. There were eleven actives in 1933.

The students in 1953 dedicated the school yearbook, The Phoenix, to her, with the words: "For the past thirty years she has represented to the students the high ideals of this, Our Alma Mater. For this we are grateful."

duate from the School of Law of Cumberland University in Lebanon. And she has more careers and avocations than the average woman.

She was born in St. Charles, Missouri, the daughter of Major Ray C. and Pearl Russell Ford. When Castle Heights Military Academy opened a junior college, Major Ford came to Lebanon with his family and became Dean of the College.

Peggy graduated from Lebanon High School, attended Lindenwood College and Murray State University, then earned the Bachelor of Laws degree at Cumberland in 1961. She was also a cheerleader, was elected Miss Cumberland, and was a member of Iota Tau Tau honorary legal fraternity.

Upon admission to the bar she opened her office for the practice of law here and continued in private practice until 1974 when she became general counsel for the Tennessee Department of Labor, later transferring to the Department of Employment Security. When her husband, Dr. Ralph Williams, became terminally ill she left state government to care for her family.

After a period in private practice she returned to the Department of Employment Security as counsel and appeared in courts across the state. In 1989 she was named chief counsel for the state agriculture department.

She has also been a college teacher, serving as a member of the evening faculty of Cumberland for five years with classes in business law.

TO ADMIT WITHOUT PREJUDICE

Looking back over the years it is apparent that the real gift of the law school was not the graduates who won fame and renown but the spirit of faith in the lasting tenets of democracy, passed on, like an unfailing torch, to five generations of young men and women.

Indeed, after 1902, much earlier than other professional schools, the law school at Lebanon admitted women without prejudice, as well as Native Americans, Asiatics, Jews, and Hispanics, and after World War II black students, all those groups who found the doors of other American professional schools closed to them.

But the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, whose central administrators were on the campus in Lebanon, had been the only major Protestant denomination in the South that was not divided either by the slavery issue or secession and it was the Cumberland Presbyterians who in the 1890's ordained women as both elders, ministers, and commissioners to the General Assembly. It was a strong tradition of equality and democracy that underlay the teaching of the law.

Football Cheerleaders with the help of Third National Bank produced the first sports seat cushions in 1992.

WOMEN AND THE ARTS

From the establishment of a School of Music at Cumberland in 1903, women students and faculty have played a leading role in fine arts studies: music, art, and drama.

"The arts is man's essential speech," Clara Hieronymus, writer on the performing and graphic arts for The Tennessean and nationally known critic, told the Cumberland board of trustees in 1982. The University has from its beginning recognized this, but particularly so during the last thirty years.

For example, Cumberland had for several years had the only handbell choir in a Tennesseee college, and it had won superior ratings at handbell festivals. The bells were a gift from Mrs. Virginia Golladay Lawlor Wilkinson as a memorial to her late husband, Richard Lawlor, a member of the Community Chorus for many years and a longtime supporter of music at Cumberland.

The College Singers were the principal music group on campus, however, and young women college students were always its nucleus, particularly as soloists. The Singers presented two programs each year — a concert in the spring and Dinner at Cumberland at Christmastime time. The choir also participated in the Tennessee Collegiate Choir Festival in the spring.

In the fall of 1961 President Ernest Stockton had suggested the formation of a Cumberland Trio, three singers who could present programs, and Robert Smith, director of music, complied. This became the Cumberland quartet the next year: Ellen Donnell, Jane Couch, Preston "Rusty" Cury, and Steve Fairbanks, with Betty Massey as pianist.

The tenure of Frances (Mrs. John) Sellars, a graduate of the Julliard School of Music and Virginia Intermont College, at Cumberland began in 1963. She has also been choir director at the First Presbyterian Church since 1957 and was music director at Walter J. Baird Junior High for years, also.

In 1965-1966 there was a college choir of sixty voices. A special choir of fifteen presented a suite from "The Sound of Music." One of the traditions inaugurated by Mrs. Sellars was the making and hanging of large Christmas wreaths at the entrance of Memorial Hall. She also performed annually as Santa Claus!

The annual Christmas Eve musical program at the First Presbyterian Church was her concept, and it has become a major community event. Another interest is the Wilson County Museum for which she provides a great deal of energetic motive power.

The support of Pat (Mrs. Joe) Bryant, a graduate of the college, cannot be overlooked. In October, 1976, a plaque was placed in Bone Hall in appreciation for the many gifts of Dr. and Mrs. Bryant to the Music Department, including six pianos, choir robes, music, and instruments.

Music was in the college curriculum from the beginning. Piano and violin were the most common instruments but by the 1890's there was a college military band and students played in the town band, as they did in the 1930's as well. The Cumberland Quartet was a touring attraction over a thirty-year period from 1913 to 1942. Culture was also served by annual visits of the Chautauque, which set up its tent on the eastern campus and an annual Lyceum series which featured such offerings as the operatta, The Bohemian Girl "in two parts" and the Croatian Tamburitza Ensemble, as well as the fairly well known symphony orchestra of the Czech conductor, Bohumir Kryl.

Through the efforts of faculty member Lucie Scott Brown, John Hartford gave a concert just before leaving for Hollywood. Another Cumberland student, Nancy Noland, received an NBC contract as a singer.

In 1969 the star of the Metropolitan Opera, Blanche Thebom, presented a concert before a capacity crowd in Baird Chapel.

The art of painting has not played quite as large a role in college activities. With the opening of the two-year liberal arts college Cumberland's serious instruction in art was begun by Lunette Gore Partlow, artist-in-residence and instructor of art from 1956 to 1971. Mrs. Partlow (formerly Mrs. Reggie Gore) was a graduate of the Theodore Kane School of Art, had taken the European tour, and attended the Universities of Tennessee and Wisconsin.

Kathy McGovern joined the Cumberland College faculty in 1973. She spent fourteen years as professor of art, leaving in 1987 to open the Reddon Art Studio in Lebanon. Her work included painting, print making, drawing, pottery, and crafts.

She is doing a series of paintings of landmark structures in Wilson County, and has made prints from many of them, including Caruthers Hall. Other paintings include the old Lebanon Public Square, buildings at Castle Heights Military Academy, the Herschel Ligon farm, and the Wilson County courthouse where Sam Houston once spoke. In 1976 she designed and printed the American Revolution Bicentennial religious medallion, an elaborate work in four colors including gold.

One of the most cherished works of art on campus is the Jesse Bessley child sculpture given in 1976 by the Year Round Garden Club in memory of Lori Miller, the young daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Gordon Miller, killed in a 1974 traffic accident.

From 1878, Caruthers Hall was the town venue for traveling companies as well as home talent shows. In the 1920's there was a particularly memorable performance on the ukulele of "You Gotta See Mama Every Night or You Won't See Mama at All," by a Lebanon student, Margaret Coe.

The Cumberland Players, directed by a professor's wife, Mrs. Robert Wherry, performed such serious plays as J.B. Priestly's Dangerous Corners, The Ninth Guest, and The Land of Heart's Desire from the middle 1930's. Under the Baptist administration there was a full-fledged program of speech and theatre, and a Little Theatre Guild with Audrey Bradshaw, Charlie Kerley, and Betty Lou Sisk as presidents while during the junior college years such ambitious vehicles as Silent Night Lonely Night, Ibsen's Ghosts, and At the Hawk's Well, as well as Barefoot in the Park, The Odd Couple, and The Mousetrap were undertaken.

(Most of this chapter on the fine arts has been taken from Chapter 5, "New Beginnings," of PHOENIX RISING (Lebanon, 1982) by F.G. Burns. Sources for that chapter included personal memory, files of The Cumberland Collegian and The Phoenix, and interviews with the quoted teachers, Dr. Bert Coble's doctoral dissertation, now in the Ernest & Bettye Stockton Archives, was also helpful.)

The Y.W.C.A. of 1935 was led by "Snooks" Howard, center, front row.

WOMEN'S SPORTS

The first female athletic teams were the 1902 tennis club and the 1903 basketball team. However the first official women's basketball team was the 1905 group, which adopted the name Cumberland Co-Eds for itself. The name stuck through 1951, the young women preferring not to be called "dogs."

Helen Smith, arriving in Lebanon with her parents, enrolled and graduated from Castle Heights School, which was co-ed then, and also graduated from Cumberland where in 1911 she was a member of an outstanding women's basketball team as well as a superb student of languages.

Women's basketball matured at Cumberland in the 1920's. The 1923 basketball team, coached by Panthea Bradshaw, made two long road trips: to Johnson City for a game with East Tennessee Normal and on February 9 and 10 to Maryville College and Abingdon, Virginia, to play Martha Washington College.

The 1924 team, led by Frances Vaughan, was at that time considered the best in the history of the school, meeting and defeating the best teams in the state.

The 1951 women's basketball team, state college champions, is listed in the Cumberland Sports Hall of Fame with a team citation. The players had been recruited from All-State and All-Regional high school players and won every game except one non-collegiate contest. The starting players were Bobby Jane Smith, Rubye Wood, Bill Cantrell, Elaine Milligan, and Louise Maynard.

The 1970 tennis team was unisex, as Marguerite McClure was the first and, so far, the only female member of a previously all-male varsity tennis team.

Betsy Stephens was All-Tennessee in tennis in 1977 and

For three years (1933-1935) Kathryn McClain (Mrs. J.P. Leathers) was a star of Cumberland women's sports.

Although women did participate in intercollegiate and intramural sports or enjoyed informal tennis games even in the 1990's there was still enthusiastic female participation as cheerleaders and at pep rallies, with bonfires and wild cheering before significant games. From the early 1960's on, required phys ed courses featured folk dancing instruction and bowling, with the frailer young women caroming down the alley after the ball.

Now in the nineties there is varsity competition for women in basketball, volleyball, tennis and softball. The 1979 women's team was particularly successful and its coach, Hal Williams, was named Tennessee Junior College Athletic Association Coach of the Year. The 1980 team was ranked second in the nation by the NJCAA. Two years later the Cumberland women went to their first national tournament. The 1983 team ranked second nationally and went to the NJCAA tournament finals before losing. Nicki Neal and Sherri Chaffin won All-American honors.

Women members of the Cumberland Sports Hall of Fame include:

Frances Vaughan Robison, basketball, 1924-28.
Bobby Jane Smith Lowe, basketball, 1951.
Nicki Neal, basketball, 1987.
Frances Wesson, basketball, 1928.
Katherine Vaughan Beard, basketball, 1932.

THE RESIDENCE HALLS

Dreams can come true. Sometimes they become reality in the most peculiar way. In a university prospectus of 1928 there appears a drawing by George Waller, architect, of the campus and buildings of the future. Every part of the dream, except the separate science building (and that is in the blueprint stage) became real. But oh how long it took!

In 1928 Memorial Hall and the Men's Dormitory (later

r. W.P. Bone Hall) were there. The projected buildings ere a music building, a women's residence hall, a gymna- um, a science building, and a library. In 1993 there have me into being Bone Hall (built as a women's residence all but later used as a fine arts building), the gymnasium f 1938, the Doris & Harry Vise Library, and the Dallas loyd Recreation Center. And in addition there are Justin otter Hall, Edward Potter Hall, Mary White Hall, the indsey Donnell Stadium and Kirk Field, the Woody Hunt aseball Stadium and Ernest Stockton Field, Rudy House, nd the Brown Cottage.

But Cumberland women have been moved from place to lace since they first acquired a home. One of the first deve- pment proposals of President John Royall Harris was fty Hall, a building similar in appearance to the men's rmitory across the campus. It would have housed fifty ung women. Until this could be built (it never was) other uarters were necessary as female enrollment increased. fter a fruitless effort to acquire a large residence on Hat- n Avenue, the University did secure the J.I.D. Hinds resi- nce on West Main and this was used as a woman's dormitory for twenty years. Later another nearby residence was rented and as Hinds House and McClain House the two were almost as great rivals as the Greek letter sororities.

In 1938 the new women's residence hall at the southern edge of the campus was ready for occupancy. Instead of rooms, there were suites, two rooms with a connecting bath.

When Second Army leased the University buildings in 1942, women students were moved into the Edward Graham residence on Hatton Avenue. After the war, the women's residence hall was restored to its intended purpose and received the name Tennessee College Hall after the merger of that Murfreesboro woman's school with Cumberland under auspices of the Tennessee Baptist Convention.

When the men's dormitory, Dr. W.P. Bone Hall, burned in 1957 the men students were then housed in Tennessee College Hall and the women were moved into the former fraternity house (now Rudy House) and it was named Howard Hall, honoring Freda (Mrs. M.S.) Howard, president of the University Women's Club. Mrs. Howard as president of the Lebanon chapter of the Association for Preservation of Tennessee Antiquities had been instrumental in the restoration of a number of oil portraits of University dignitaries. Other women students were moved to a frame house that faced West Spring Street, Hereford House (no longer standing). Finally Mary White Hall was completed.

There was nothing like dormitory life to forge lifelong friendships. It was like a large family, ruled by the matron with the firm hand of a grandmother who knew what mischief and what fun might be planned. "We're sisters, sisters," they sang.

SUPERLATIVES

The first selection of superlatives, or campus beauties, was for the 1924 yearbook. In a section titled "Features" were full page photographs of Nana Jennings, Prettiest Girl, Literary Department; Anne Pursley, Most Popular, Literary Department (both chosen in a chapel election); Mabel Witherspoon, Phoenix sponsor; and Margaret Grisham, Kick-Off sponsor.

The first co-ed to win the title "Miss Cumberland" was Panthea Bradshaw, in 1925. Her photographs, showing her in classroom attire, formal wear, and sports dress, with her tennis racquet, lead the section candidly titled "Beauty Section," followed by Helen Hathorn, the Kick-Off sponsor, and Mary Bruce and Ray Patton, college sponsors. In all, twenty-two young women of the college were honored.

In 1928, a plain young woman was selected "Prettiest Girl." She was Nell Plain, a freshman from Madisonville, Kentucky, and a sister in Delta Phi Omega.

Dignitaries selected beauty superlatives on several occasions: in 1940, Earl Carroll, of the Vanities fame, picked Annette Sellars as Prettiest Girl. In 1963, Walter Sharp of the Tennessee Fine Arts Center selected Jane Miller Couch, a Lebanon sophomore. In 1964 Mrs.Tennessee, Betty Jo Welch, chose Ann Witt as Miss Phoenix and in 1965 George Allen, friend of presidents, selected Barbara Harris for the same honor. For several years Mr. and Miss Cumberland became Mr. and Mrs. Cumberland.

CAMPUSOLOGY AND THE JAZZ AGE

When President John Royall Harris, soon after taking office, was asking his board of trustees to support his request to authorize a women's dormitory, he reminded them of an adage: "Where the girls are, there the boys will be."

Certainly the mating of true hearts has long been a function of college life, and many a long married couple was struck by Cupid's arrow on the campus at Cumberland. Law students were attractive prospective partners and many a local girl found her mate at the "Little Athens of the South," as Dr. Stockton Sr. was known to say. Some campus romances withered, however. One former student returned for an Alumni Weekend "fifty years later" and found himself and his wife (whom he met and wed some time after leaving school) seated next to his college "true love."

The true flavor of the 1920's was captured in a joke ad in the 1923 Phoenix:

LYRIC THEATRE

Happy Stratton Presents:

Mabel Witherspoon, starring in a real super special, THREE O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING, supported by an all-star cast, including Mildred Prewett, Louise Grimmet, Sue Fiunley, and others.

(Dr. Harris will see them 48 hours later.)

Special music: Eddleman's Jazz Hounds.

Admission $1.50 (Red ribbon)

Don't miss this feature. Last one that students will ever see while in Cumberland. One night only.

And of course it was not the last night of such an event: later students enjoyed themselves at Greenbrier Lake, Horn Springs, the Rainbow Club, the Plantation Club, Bartons Creek boat dock, or the rock quarry, depending on their class year!

(Dr. Harris as the president of Cumberland was chief disciplinary officer, a role later assigned the Dean of Students (Col. Lloyd Brown and Darryl Robinson, for example.)

And in the heart of the Jazz Age. The Phoenix for 1926 inquired:

THINGS WE NOTICE

We wonder. . .

if a centipede really can Charleston?

if Miss Parks (Miss Cumberland) still acts prissy.

if Helen Armstrong intends to be a lawyer.

if Willard Henson ever studies anything but Tiny (Knee).

if you know Mrs. Alward (an Education Teacher) is from Seattle.

On-campus dances were strictly forbidden until at least 1938. Drinking would get you "shipped," and co-eds were not permitted to marry without the consent of the faculty. Although young women were observed from time to time slipping out of dorm windows, hours were pretty well enforced well into the 1960's. And one young man, later president of a bank, was pushed off the porch roof of Howard Hall for attempting entry into a second floor window! He had been mischievously given reason to think he would be welcomed.

RULERS OF THE PRINTED WORD

It was 1948, one hundred six years after the opening of the college in Lebanon and fifty-four years after Morella Cowden enrolled as a student, before a woman served as editor of the annual. Even then, after Jean Sedberry in 1948 and Audrey Bradshaw in 1949, it was another twelve years before The Phoenix was entrusted to female hands.

Not until the two-year college era did a woman student edit The Cumberland Collegian. Beth Donnell, editor in 1959-1960, was the first of three sisters to work on The Collegian staff. Ellen, in 1961-1963, was a writer and proof reader, and Mary Ann, as editor in 1967-1968, won the All-American rating off the Associated Collegiate Press.

But the women made up for lost time. Twelve of the seventeen editors of The Collegian from 1959-1960 until regular publication of the newspaper was interrupted for a long while were co-eds.

THE WOMEN AS EDITORS:

WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS

Activities for women students were limited until the mid-1920's, when sororities were organized. In 1923 there was only the Young Women's Christian Association, the national YWCA having acted at its convention in Hot Springs, Arkansas, to encourage the college organizations. The sixteen members that year included most of the acknowledged women campus leaders. That women were moving into positions of leadership was shown by the staff of The Kick-Off, the student newspaper, where the three assistant editors, Panthea Bradshaw, Mildred Prewett, and Marvine Bone, were all recognized leaders in classroom and extracurricular activities.

The Hypatian Literary Society, although co-ed, was predominately female.

In 1931 the red-headed students banded together, as the Cumberland Cardinals, thirteen strong, of whom four were female: Josephine Harris, who was secretary-treasurer, Elizabeth Wilson, Lucy Connell, vice-president, and Amy Jo Byars.

The first women to serve on the Student Council were Rosalie Bengal, Frances Wesson, and Aurine Wilkins, in 1925-1926.

One of the most interesting and exciting organizations to come to life at Cumberland was a transplant from the University of Tennessee. Beta Chapter of the Zebra Club was organized by four Cumberland co-eds, Dorothy Donaldson, Josephine Harris, Virginia Golladay, and Mattie Walker. The Lord High Horse, Miss Donaldson, announced, "The club fosters love of parties and wholesome cooperation to that end! Zebra Be Praised!"

Miss Golladay, later to become University Trustee Mrs. R.D. Wilkinson, was the first Queen of the May when the May Day fete was celebrated.

Until 1932-1933 the Glee Club was entirely male. In the fall of 1932, however, women became participants under the direction of Mrs. Theora Ferrell, head of the voice department. The accompanist, Dr. Graves Thompson, a young Harvard Ph.D., later went to Hampden-Sydney College, his Alma Mater, and continued to teach Latin and the classics until he was in his nineties!

The first sorority chapter, Delta Sigma Beta, was chartered in 1924 with eleven members. Its colors, green and white, and its flower, the sweet pea, symbolized the springtime of life. It was not, however, represented on the University Pan-Hellenic Council.

However, in 1916 there was a unisex social fraternity! The remembers of Zeta Chapter of Kappa Alpha Zeta that year included Marie Weeks, a freshman.

Two young women have a conversation in a campus scene, autumn of 1968.

The principal organizations for many years were the Greek letter sororities, Sigma Delta Sigma and Delta Phi Omega — Sigma Delt and DPO — both organized in 1926. Their rivalry in the annual Stunt Night skits was equaled only by that between the Hinds House and McClain House women's dormitories.

Rose Fly, director of Mitchell Library for over a decade, received much credit for the accreditation of the two-year college.

Both sororities were allied to fraternities, Sigma Delt to S.A.E. and DPO to Lambda Chi, and a number of marriages resulted. Sigma Delta Sigma has now been revived.

In 1926 a chapter of Sigma Beta Kappa, national honor society, was chartered. Women charter members were Elizabeth Harris, Claudia Reeves, Rosalie Bengal, Mary Bruce, Aurine Wilkins, and Lucile Alexander.

During the period of Baptist sponsorship, there were many organizations for women students: the only Greek letter organization which had women members was Alpha Psi Omega drama honor society but the Cynthian and Thalian Societies were sororities in all but name, and there was the Town and Country Club for commuters.

After 1960 many American colleges became known as "suitcase colleges." This meant that on weekends every residential student packed up and went home. Cumberland College of Tennessee was one of these, as the old University, with its large enrollment of students from other states, could never have been.

Students in the two-year school did their best and they were quite lively times. At various times young men and women were involved in the Honor Council, Phi Theta Kappa, the junior college honor society based on the Phi Beta Kappa idea, the Company of Scholars and Adventurers, a challenging notion for good students who wanted a variety of activities outside the classroom, the Spelunkers, who went underground, and other more conventional groups. The Heurethelian Society, named for an earlier literary society, was active for a few years in the 1970's.

There have always been places to go: Sno-White Drive-In, the Rainbow Club, Horn Springs, Shannon's, the movies, even Bartons Creek boat dock or the rock quarry (occasionally policed by the Dean of Students) or, if real desperate, the cemetery!

And there was Sadie Hawkins Day, established in the mid-sixties, which gave everybody a chance to dress up like hillbillies from Dogpatch and for the girls to chase the boys like Daisy May chased Li'l Abner, and then of course a dance that night. There was a memorable Botany class field trip to Gatlinburg, and guitars and songs and students sitting on the main stairway and standing in the second floor hall.

And whether four-year or two, after the ban on dancing was relaxed in 1937 there were dances always, not as elaborate as the memorable Blue Barron tea dance sponsored by the Pan-Hellenic Council in 1938, nor as informal as the fraternity house dances on weekends, but occasions for girls to wear their formals. Once Mrs. Brown stopped a dance because of the kind of language in a vocal, but mostly the dances were proper pleasure. There was the dance in the lower floor of the Student Center when "Adam Eden" took liberties with "Eve Eden" as they descended the stairs. There was the costume dance with the Purple Haze providing the music. There was the annual YWCA Winter Carnival, and a White Christmas Ball, and a Winter Wonderland Ball, Valentine Balls, the Spring Fling, the crowning of the Basketball Queen at Homecoming and the elaborate ceremonies of 1947 with ten queens and Betty Jo Branham as THE Football Queen.

Terry Thompson said it in the 1980 Phoenix:

"It won't be easy saying goodbye to this place... to these friends, but I have so much more to learn about the world, about myself, and it's time to move on. I only know that wherever I go, whatever I do, the days I've spent right here will always be a really special part of my life... a time to remember."

THE UNIVERSITY WOMAN'S CLUB

It is not possible to observe the Centennial of Women at Cumberland University without noticing the loyal and energetic group of women who have made up the University Woman's Club (or, during the Cumberland College of Tennessee era, the Cumberland Woman's Club).

The club was founded in February, 1924, as a federated club. Its membership has always been composed of wives of members of the faculty and administration, wives of local trustees, women members of the faculty, and all women connected with Cumberland.

Over the years many projects have been sponsored: scholarships, furnishing and redecoration of dormitory rooms, donations of books to the library, and awards at Commencement. The club's social function has been of equal importance in providing a focal point for making friends among "town and gown." One popular annual event was the "Taste and Tell" luncheon with sampling of bite-size morsels prepared by club members from their favorite recipes. A collection of these recipe cards was then made available for purchase, the proceeds going into the scholarship fund. A major event of 1988-1989 was the "Harbinger Gala," a black tie dinner for the benefit of the scholarship fund.

The women supported another special project, the purchase of Oneida flatware and Lenox china for hospitality in the Rudy House.

Frances (Mrs. John) Sellars discusses plans for a concert in Baird Chapel, a suite from The Sound of Music, in 1966.

The Portia Club

Wives of law students and women in the law school were organized for social purposes in the Portia Club, active until World War II.

The Dames Club

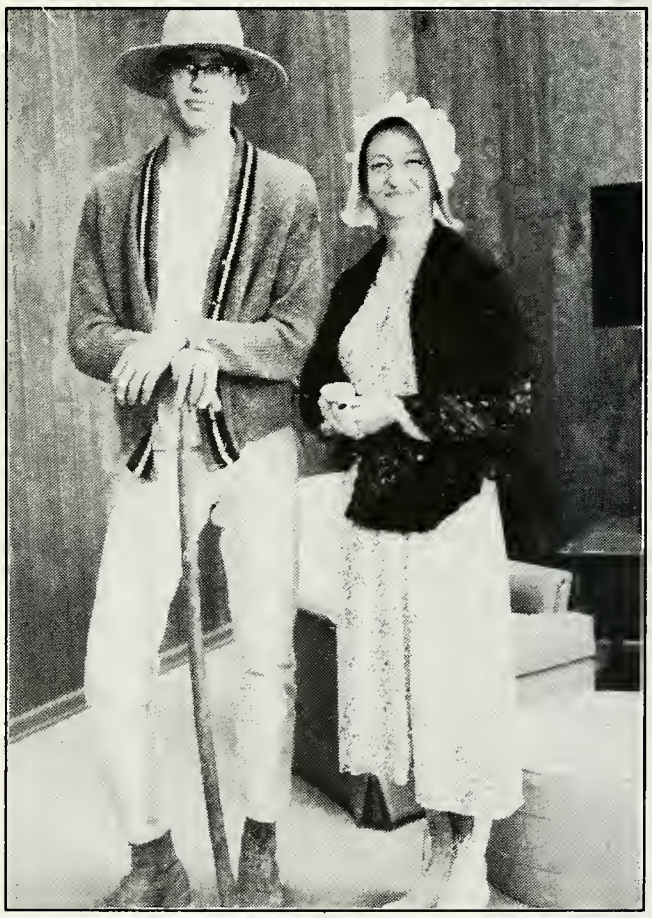
After the war the organization for women law students, wives of students, and wives of the law faculty was the Dames Club. This was particularly active when a large number of returning veterans attending school under the G.I. Bill were married and, in many cases, fathers. Mrs. Sam Gilreath, wife of the dean and a former faculty member herself, was active in organizing and encouraging the organization.

Cardinal Key

Organized as Silver Scroll in 1940-1941, the honor society for women became a chapter of Cardinal Key, sister fraternal order to Blue Key. Isabelle Moss was president in 1941, Margaret Sanders in 1942.

The Year Round Garden Club

Not a university organization but important nevertheless is the Year Round Garden Club of Lebanon which has sponsored landscaping and tree planting on the campus since 1962 and gave a Jesse Beesley child sculpture in memory of Lori Miller, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Gordon Miller who was killed in a traffic accident in 1974. The club sponsors an annual Christmas dinner and auction for the benefit of its landscaping projects.

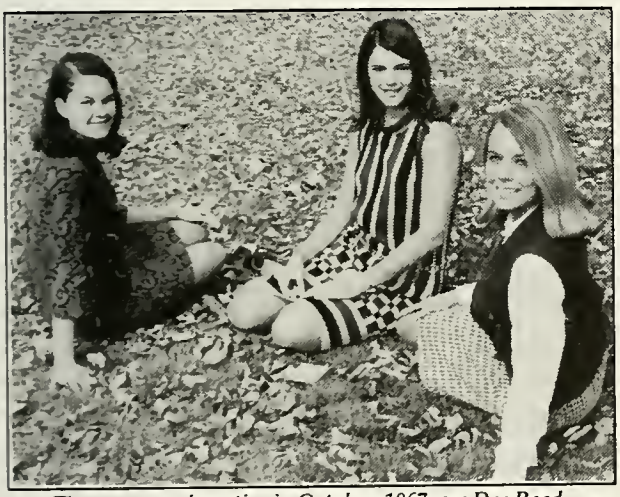


Everybody, faculty included, dressed Dogpatch style on the annual Sadie Hawkins Day. Here, in 1968, is Mrs. Sidney Berry, professor of American History, with Tom Hardaway, professor of biology.

THE CHRISTIAN INFLUENCE

Many of the organizations led by women students during the past one hundred years have been Christian in nature. These have included the Young Women's Christian Association (YWCA), the Student Christian Association, the Baptist Student Union, the Christian Student Union, the Bible Circle (1885-1909) for wives of faculty and students in the Theological School, the Student Volunteer Band, composed of Cumberland students who were committed to Christian work in foreign lands, and the Life Service Group (1886-1935).

Because Cumberland was founded by Cumberland Presbyterians and remained under church auspices until 1951, and maintains an ecumenical relationship with various religious faiths, it continues to provide the opportunity for exploration of ethical and moral systems. There is a full offering of courses in religion and philosophy, comprising 24 semester hours in the undergraduate college.



Three campus beauties in October, 1967, are Dee Read, Cynthia Muse, and Barbara Rogers.

THE HEREFORDS

From the time Grace Hereford entered the second year of Cumberland Prep in 1917 until her sister Ada graduated in 1936, at least one of the five Herefords (Grace, Nannie, Francis, Julia, and Ada) and sometimes three were in school at Cumberland.

Nannie Hereford was born in Osaka, Japan, a daughter of Presbyterian missionaries. She spent her childhood years with her family in Hiroshima. At the age of fourteen she came to Lebanon, Tennessee, for her high school education, attending the Preparatory Department of Cumberland University and earning the Bachelor of Science degree in 1930. Only a few others were in this last class of students who spent eight years at Cumberland! Among them were Josephine Bentley and Elsie May Alexander Baker.

Appointed by the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, she sailed for Japan in June, 1932. After attending language school in Tokyo she was assigned to Hokusei Jo Gakko (Northern Star Girls School) in Sapporo, Hokkaido. As war approached in 1941 the American teachers became an embarrassment to the authorites of the school, and so they were requested to leave. The Presbyterian board secured a transfer for her to Silliman University in Dumaguete, Negros, The Phillipines. She arrived there just one month before Pearl Harbor. However, it required six months for the Japanese Army to work its way down to this southern island. The group spent part of this time in the mountains but eventually the Japanese discovered them and they were brought back to the city, then moved to Bacoloc. Six months later, in March, 1943, they were taken to Manila to Santo Tomas Internment Camp.

In February, 1945, American troops liberated the internees and eventually a troop ship brought her back to the United States and she rejoined her family, who had spent the war years in Lebanon. After a year of furlough she was ready to go back to work. Unable then to go back to Japan she returned to the Philippines for a five-year term teaching English and Bible at Silliman. After that she did go back to Japan, this time to do evangelistic work, first in Utsunomiya, then in Niigata Prefecture. Finally, her last three years were spent in Tokyo at Joshi Gakuin, a former Presbyterian mission girls school.

Retiring in 1974 she settled in Nashville with her sister, Dean Julia Hereford of the Vanderbilt University of Nursing. Dean Hereford was co-chairman of the Graduate Education Commitee of the Southern Regional Education Board.

Grace and Egon Hessel retired to Ohio.

Mary Ann Donnell performs a chemistry experiment in 1968.

ARLINAR A. STAFFORD

She is better known as "Sister" and she is a healing hand for all whom she meets. Arlina A. Atkins Stafford was a member of the first graduating class of Cumberland University after the four-year college was restored. However she had attained respect and honors before then.

In 1976, during the Bicentennial celebration, she was chosen one of the "Hidden Heroines" of Wilson County. Only recently she received the associate's degree from the Victory Bible Training Center in Nashville.

Born in Wyatt, Missouri, she was reared in Edith Chapel, Illinois, and began her education there in the Perkins elementary school, attending Douglass and Lovejoy High schools, and after graduating from Erma Lee Beauty College, Cleveland, Ohio, was licensed by the Ohio State Board. "Our motto at Perkins School was 'We are not at the top but we are climbing,'" she said. "Now I will climb for Jesus as long as there is a Jesus and that is forever!"

Sister Stafford joined the Church of God of Prophecy No. 3 in Cleveland, Tennessee, in 1963, received sanctification and was baptized in 1964, and began her ministry in 1966 with missionary work in Toledo, Cleveland, Milwaukee, and Benton Harbor, Michigan. She attended Church of God of Prophecy Training Institute and the Professional Broadcasters School at Knoxville.

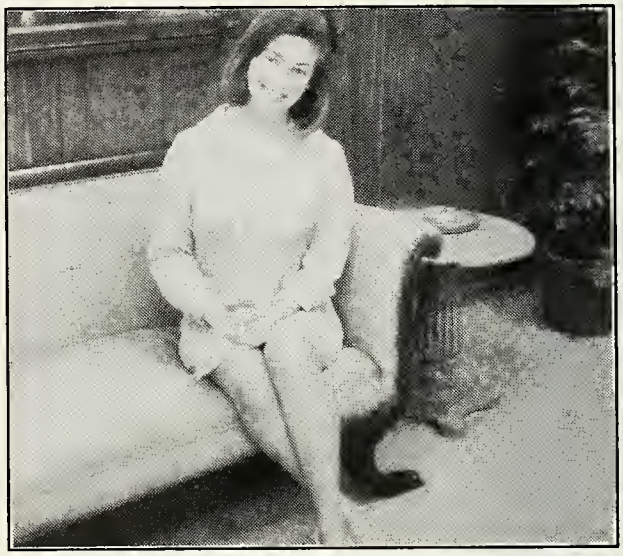
"I moved to Tennessee on faith, with nothing, and nowhere to put it," she said. Sister Stafford became pastor of the East Lebanon Church of God of Prophecy, 215 McGregor Street. She began attending Cumberland College, then completed the baccalaureate course as a member of the first graduating class of the renewed Cumberland University, receiving the Bachelor of Arts and the Bachelor of Science degrees.

She is now employed by Cedarcroft Inc. as Evangelist, and the University. She will continue with Victory Bible Training Center in September, 1993.

Sister Stafford is a member of the Church of God of Prophecy of Lebanon, whose pastor is the Rev. Tony Coile. She is married to Walter F. Stafford and has a son and three grandchildren. She also has one foster child, Sandra Schieman Stafford, and one godchild, Andy Raines.

GOLDEN STOCKTON BAIRD

Having been instrumental in bringing co-education to the University, eleven Cumberland women served on the mission field overseas. One of the more recent fraternal workers has been Golden Stockton who, with her husband, Dr. Richard Baird, completed decades of service in Korea. Both continued to be active in denominational affairs.



A Cumberland admissions counselor & a Miss Tennessee contestant, Bonnie Dehoff (Mrs. Ray Fakes) was later Tennessee's entry in the "Teacher in Space" competition.

WOMEN WITH A MISSION

MRS. Y.P. WOOTEN

In the fall of 1920, Mrs. Virginia Tomlinson Wooten, principal of the Wooten private school in Lebanon, which from 1917 had been offering a four-year high school course, was invited to become principal of the Cumberland University Preparatory School. She accepted. Mrs. Wooten was a native of Maury County, Tennessee. She came to Lebanon when her husband, Yandell P. Wooten, a pharmacist, moved his business, and joined the faculty of a private elementary school. She earned the Master of Arts degree at George Peabody College for Teachers and then did further graduate study at Peabody. Her high reputation as a trainer of teachers was soundly based on her record. Many members of the profession who are now nearing retirement in Tennessee and Kentucky received their undergraduate instruction in education in her classes after she became Professor of Education in the College of Arts & Sciences in 1927. They, as well as the co-eds whom she served as Dean of Women remember "Phoebe" as affectionately as the generations before remembered "Old Tom" or "Uncle Bill." During her administration as principal, Mrs. Wooten obtained accreditation from the Association of Colleges and Preparatory Schools of the Southern States; built enrollment to a high point of 123 students in 1924, larger than either Lebanon High or Castle Heights Military Academy, its local rivals; and planned the curriculum on a standard basis, "thoroughly preparing for college or life," as Mrs. Wooten stated in a prospectus. After the school year of 1926-1927, the Preparatory School was closed. Its last faculty was composed of Mrs. Wooten, Charlene Miller, and Ralph T. Donnell.

DOROTHY JENKINS

Mrs. William Jenkins has been a member of the Cumberland faculty since 1977, with an appointment in developmental studies and English. She holds certification as a Developmental Specialist, in addition to her academic degrees. As an administrator she is coordinator of Developmental Studies, and Director of the Undergraduate Teacher Education Program.

Developmental Studies has been a crucial field of instruction, both during the last years of the two-year college program and the building of an accredited four-year curriculum as educators came to realize that students who leave high school poorly prepared for college work should not be turned away out of hand but offered an opportunity to level their abilities. Thus developmental studies courses have found a place in all institutions of higher education (even at Harvard!).

Professor Jenkins earned the Bachelor's degree at Samford University at Birmingham, the Master of Arts at George Peabody College of Vanderbilt University, and the Educational Specialist degree at Appalachian State University with additional study at the University of Tennessee, Peabody, Middle Tennessee State University, and Tennessee Technological University.

CHARLENE McCOIN KOZY

Dr. Charlene Kozy is chair of the Working Adult Degree Program. She joined the Cumberland faculty in the fall of 1985 as assistant professor of education.

She has her B.A. degree from Tennessee Technological University and the Master of Arts and Doctor of Arts from Middle Tennessee State University, with additional study at Tennessee State University, the University of Tennessee, and The United States International University. Her academic fields are history and political science.

The Working Adult Degree program began in January, 1984, with Dr. Phyllis Phillips as coordinator and Harriet Lancaster as administrative assistant. The Tennessee National Guard was its nucleus and Guardsmen, who completed the program, are known as the "Wings of the Phoenix."

With Dr. Kozy as coordinator, the program has become even more vital. She supervises a dozen sites of off-campus courses. In August, 1989, there were five hundred students enrolled in a menu of one or more courses.

It is in this kind of way that Cumberland has become a quite different place from the residential-commuter school that existed before World War II and even into the mid-1970's.

WOMEN TO REMEMBER

ELIZABETH HARRIS McDAVID

When Elizabeth Harris McDavid died in September, 1968, Cumberland College of Tennessee lost one of its most distinguished teachers, a woman who was not only a graduate of Cumberland but one of the faculty who were brought to Lebanon by President Ernest L. Stockton to strengthen the new two-year liberal arts programs.

She was the first woman to earn a Doctor of Philosophy degree in English at Vanderbilt University, receiving the doctorate in 1935. She had previously received a Bachelor's degree from Cumberland and the Master's from Vanderbilt.

She was born in Auburn, Kentucky, a daughter of Prof. and Mrs. W. Lee Harris. She attended Lebanon High School where her father had been principal.

Dr. McDavid's teaching career spanned forty years, beginning in 1928 at Lincoln Memorial University. She also taught at Vanderbilt, Grenada College in Mississippi, College of the Ozarks in Arkansas, Winthrop College in South Carolina, Southern Illinois University, and Cumberland. She was considered an authority in comparative literature and had participated in meetings of the Modern Language Assocation.

Her husband, from whom she was later divorced, was Raven McDavid, an internationally known scholar in the field of linguistics. They had one daughter, Betty, now the wife of James David Mason of Knoxville.

While at Lincoln Memorial she met the poet Jesse Stuart and maintained a correspondence with him, although she considered him inferior to the Fugitive Poets whom she had known at Vanderbilt. Dr. McDavid herself was a member of the Facets group of poets who were of a somewhat later period than John Crowe Ransom, Allen Tate, and the Fugitives and who included the well-known critic and author Cleanth Brooks.

In 1958 she joined the Cumberland faculty where her brother, Thomas F. Harris, had become assistant to the president. She died September 5, 1968 in Vanderbilt Hospital. Her funeral services were held at the First Presbyterian Church, of which she was a member. Many of her students attended, honoring a teacher whom they were never to forget.

IMOGENE AHLES

Rod and Imogene Ahles, trustee and secretary to the president, alumni who have made a difference, are shown at the 1992 John Duncan-Law Day dinner which they helped arrange.

Whenever it becomes necessary to learn something about the administrative side of Cumberland University the first thought has been to "ask Imogene."

Imogene Ahles, administrative secretary to the president, to every president of Cumberland, in fact, since Dr. Charles Havens, has also been a member of the faculty of both the two-year college and the four-year university, a member of major committees, including the Award of the Phoenix commitee, active in the Cumberland Woman's Club, taker of mintues of the Board of Trustees and the executive committee, and unofficial adviser and repository of memories on every conceivable matter from the present address of Dr. Havens and the name of the tennis coach when Sam Hatcher was on the team to the current week's schedule of meetings in the K Room.

In other words, Imogene, who was the wife of Lebanon attorney and judge Rodney Ahles, was the ideal executive secretary.

Her closet, which opened off the reception room of President Ray Phillips' office, is legendary. It houses minutes, notes, yearbooks, flower vases, photographs of trustees and faculty, brochures, catalogs, computer printer ribbons, and other Cumberland memorabilia whose nature was known only to Mrs. Ahles. Her closet and her memory were invaluable when the anniversary history of Cumberland was being written. But whenever something was confidential, to Mrs. Ahles it remained a confidence.

She was a graduate of Watertown High school and received the Bachelor of Arts degree from Cumberland. She was often offered but each time declined an Award of the Phoenix on the modest grounds that an employee of the school should not be eligible. Her faculty assignments included professor of secretarial science in Cumberland University and Cumberland College of Tennessee.

She also served as registrar of the college and secretary to the business manager.

She was a Rotary Ann and was First Lady of the Noon Rotary Club in 1989-1990.

On July 21, 1993, Imogene Bradley Ahles died, after a long illness.

VIRGINIA GOLLADAY LAWLOR WILKINSON

Student, teacher, trustee, benefactor, founding donor of the handbell choir, and an Honorary Doctor of Humanities, Virginia Golladay Lawlor Wilkinson has been one of the University's most loyal and most active alumnae.

She is a native of Lebanon and a graduate of Lebanon High School. She received the Bachelor of Arts degree magna cum laude from Cumberland in 1932. She also holds a Master of Arts degree from Vanderbilt, and was a member of the Cumberland English faculty for three years.

After graduation from Cumberland she went to Washington, D.C., and was employed there when she met and married Richard D. Lawlor, an engineering graduate of Tufts University. After World War II, he owned and operated the Lawlor Insurance Agency in Lebanon.

Her career of public service is distinguished. She has been regent of Margaret Gaston Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, president of Robert Hatton Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, president of the Lebanon Woman's Club, co-founder and member of the board of the Sound and Light Theatre Company, president of History Associates of Wilson County and co-author of the chapter on Education in the 1961 History of Wilson County, sponsored by the Tennessee Historical Commission.

Among other honors and offices, she has been literary director of the Woman's Club of Nashville and program director of the Browning Club of Nashville. A Methodist, she has been chairman of the Official Board of the First Methodist Church and president of the Woman's Society of Christian Service.

She is a member of the Cumberland Board of Trustees and donated the Lawlor Memorial handbells for the newly organized choir in memory of her late husband. She is married to Dr. R. Dean Wilkinson and they now live in Hermitage.

DR. JEANETTE C. RUDY

Jeanette Cantrell Rudy served as a public health nurse in Davidson County, Tennessee, on the staff of Dr. John J. Lentz, after receiving her R.N. from the St. Thomas Hospital School of Nursing in 1948. In 1949 she became the wife of Daniel Clees Rudy, co-founder of the Rudy's Farm Sausage Company. Their life in Pennington's Bend inspired her to write a comprehensive history of that Davidson County community.

Through numerous organizations and philanthropic activties she has contributed generously to the Nashville, Donelson, and Lebanon communities over the years. After her husband's death she founded the Dan Rudy Cancer Center at St. Thomas Hospital.

She is a major supporter of the Nashville Police and Fire Departments and was the major donor of the National Police Memorial in Washington, D.C.

Gun collecting is a hobby that is closely related to her love of dove hunting, but she also collects bottles, rocks, signed baseballs, paintings, Indian artifacts, and stamps, and has the best collection of Federal Duck Stamps in the world. She has been Ladies' State Trapshooting champion for nine years.

She is a member of the board of trustees of Cumberland

University, received the Doctor of Humanities degree from Cumberland in 1990, and through her efforts the University established its School of Nursing. She was then honored by the naming of the Jeanette Cantrell Rudy Division of Nursing. Also bearing her name is the Jeanette C. Rudy Hall on the campus, restored through her efforts and her generosity.

Young women were on the front row in the new Jenkins language laboratory in 1969.

BETTYE HATFIELD STOCKTON

During the twenty-five years that Ernest L. Stockton Jr. served as President of Cumberland University there was a feminine hand strengthening him and supporting the social graces of college life.

It was President Stockton's unfailing custom when introducing the spouse of a guest speaker to present "his lovely wife." Such an introduction was certainly also true of his gracious hostess, who came to be known as the First Lady of Cumberland, having that title longer than any other woman.

Bettye Hatfield Stockton came to Cumberland from Mt. Juliet in 1940, a sophomore after one year at David Lipscomb College, accompanied by her sister, Mary Jennings Hatfield, who was a freshman.

It was a very active year for her. She became a member of Sigma Delta Sigma, of the Cumberland YWCA, and the Cumberland Players, and was a reporter for The Collegian. That spring of 1941 when Professor Louis Adams' political science class "declared war" on the Axis powers she was featured in a news photograph as one of three co-eds "knitting for the troops."

And later that year she married Ernest Stockton, who was then an officer in the United States Coast Guard. When peace returned he went to graduate school, then became a classroom teacher at Castle Heights Military Academy. Mrs. Stockton became a faculty wife. At the boys' school that meant becoming involved with cadet life and as Stockton advanced in rank and responsibility acquiring the responsibilities of a faculty hostess. Moving into the President's house at Cumberland was an extension of this life and she performed her role superbly.

There is one daughter, Sharon, who also attended Cumberland.

Lynda Miller and friends enjoy a musical time in the women's residence hall after supper (1968).

Mrs. Stockton is a member of Le Coterie, the Daughters of the American Revolution, and the Cumberland Woman's Club, and is a member of the College Street Church of Christ.
